Acceptance for publication is generally made following the presentation of the paper during one of the scientific national and/or international conferences. The papers will have been previously evaluated by the scientific committees of the conferences; the results of research will have been disseminated through public defence as part of the ensuing debates, so that the authors will have had the opportunity to make the necessary amendments.

Upon submission, all papers are re-evaluated by two members of the scientific committee of the journal, who are peer reviewers; they generally follow some aspects that validate the scientific quality of the manuscripts: relevance and appropriateness of the research methods to the topic/field of study; the quality and significance of scientific literature review; appropriate referencing and citations; compliance with ethical issues; compliance with national and/or international academic writing and editing standards. Upon evaluation, each paper will be rated as follows:

- a). Accepted as it is;
- b). Accepted with changes recommended by the reviewers;
- c). Rejected.
